The present invention relates to a hydraulic locking device for connecting a support plate to a body panel to be mounted on a vehicle body panel. Conventionally, the hydraulic locking device for connecting a support plate to a body panel to be mounted on a vehicle body panel is well-known as described in Japanese Utility Model Publication No. 57-20,917, for example. In general, the body panel and the support plate to be mounted on the vehicle body panel are assembled to each other by threaded engaging means such as bolts. An example of the threaded engaging means is shown in FIG. 10. Numeral 50 indicates a support plate having threaded engaging means 51 and 52 at two opposite ends thereof. Numeral 20 indicates a body panel having a flange portion 21 at a rear end thereof, numeral 22 indicates a front end of the body panel to be coupled with the support plate 50, numeral 23 indicates a rear end of the body panel 20, numeral 24 indicates a front end of the support plate 50 engaged with the flange portion 21, and numeral 25 indicates a nut engaged with the threaded engaging means 51 of the support plate 50 to prevent the threaded engaging means 51 from being disengaged from the threaded engaging means 52. In FIG. 10, numeral 26 indicates a nut engaged with the threaded engaging means 52 of the support plate 50 to prevent the threaded engaging means 52 from being disengaged from the threaded engaging means 51, numeral 27 indicates a hole formed in the body panel 20 to be passed through by the threaded engaging means 52, and numeral 28 indicates a washer for preventing the body panel 20 from being lifted. The support plate 50 is disposed on the body panel 20, and the flange portion 21 of the body panel 20 is press-fitted and coupled with the front end 24 of the support plate 50 by a jig or the like to assemble the body panel 20 and the support plate 50. Thereafter, the threaded engaging means 51
